The Shelf Project: Hosting Endangered Butterflies

This 11ha Council site was originally a weedy cattle paddock. Between 2015 and 2019, Energex planted thousands of trees in accordance with its Environmental Offset Policy. Then, in 2019, TM Landcare was awarded a three-year Qld Government Community Sustainability Action Grant for endangered species. Our Richmond Birdwing Butterfly Project has planted 2000 additional local species to provide nectar for the butterflies, and 500 vines (Pararistolochia praevenosa) for the female butterflies lay their eggs on. Richard Bull, a Richmond Birdwing Butterfly expert, has been our consultant and has propagated many of the vines. Our contractors, Forest Rehabilitation Ecology, have planted and weeded the site, with help from our Landcare volunteers.

Last week the Tuesday Team and locals planted 80 tubestock near the entrance of this public reserve and then took a tour through the site to view the fine growth of previous plantings. This is a fine example of the valuable ecological work that TM Landcare continues to accomplish across our sites.

Richard Bull giving an informative talk about the life cycle of the Richmond Birdwing Butterfly and the importance of this project for the future well-being of the species.
